A pretty cool reference back to the first section can be made automatically like this: 1.1

The standard command will just generate a number, like this : 1.1

You can also use the command created in the “ProjectBuilder” to customise your references.

This command includes the word “Section” before the reference: Section 1.1

You can do the same for figures and tables. If you label them correctly, then they will automatically be added to the list of tables and figures at the end of the document.

2.3.2 A second level 3 heading

This section contains some fancy equations these can be entered in a couple of ways, but the LaTeX version is probably the most adaptable and consistent. in text you can just type something in single \$ marks, and it will stay in line, $y = \beta_0 + \beta_1 \ln(x^2) + \frac{ac}{x_1^2}$.

Or you can type it in double $$ marks and it will float the equation in the middle of the page with white space around it.

$$y = \beta_0 + \beta_1 \ln(x^2) + \frac{ac}{x_1^2}$$

If you want to get really fancy and to be able to reference your equations automatically, you can also add a label, but this is easier to do in the LaTeX version.

$$y = \beta_0 + \beta_1 \ln(x^2) + \frac{ac}{x_1^2} \tag{2.1}$$

This version allows you to do a reference to Equation (2.1) in your text. If you look at the code, you will see that there are no section numbers or equation numbers “hard coded” into the text. If I add another equation above this one, it will just adjust the numbering automatically.

The structure of the numbering of different elements is set in the YAML of the “ProjectBuilder”. There you will find code that looks like this `\counterwithin{table}{section}` - this means, that every time a level 1 section is started, the counter for tables will start from 1 again.
